

Samantha

February 9, 2014

Hurricane Sandy

During Hurricane Sandy, New York City went underwater. Everybody lost electricity and heat, but they didn't overreact. The hurricane roused everyone. I can't imagine what that must have felt like for the people. It must have been a vast storm to spread that far and make the city a wreck. It was like the whole city went just went overboard. Subways and overpasses were submerged.

While the city was in a wreck, my uncle made it to Massachusetts from New York City safely, so he didn't have to deal with not having heat. While he was here, he constantly watched the weather channel to inform him just how the storm was doing. When he returned home, he called us and said, "I came to the conclusion that this is the worst storm that New York has ever had ." The city will have to undergo many repairs and have to have a resourceful government to solve this mess. All of the bountiful disaster money will help to keep the repairs going on.